New Graduate Degree Program: PhD International Crime and Justice
presented by Harry Wright

- First program in the US. Changed curriculum and collaborated with Law School.
- Online Component removed and residency requirement added.
- 18 credits must be taken on-site. Added a required supervised teaching component. First in the US to do so for PhD. Students must be concurrently enrolled in CAT's Teaching certificate.
- Important for FIU to be the first to offer this degree.

The motion to approve the PhD in International Crime and Justice was moved and unanimously approved by the Graduate Council and the University Curriculum Committee.

New Graduate Degree Program: MS in Special Education Online presented by Elizabeth Cramer

- For certified special education teachers that have already completed

- a pre-service teacher education program.
- Program is exactly the same as the existing face-to-face program. Concentration in Autism will be required for all students in the first co-hort.
 - Students must be currently teaching and hold a valid teaching certificate to be enrolled in this program.
 - Faculty overload for this program is higher than regular overload and faculty are excited about the incentives.

The motion to approve the MS in Special Education Online program was moved and unanimously approved by the Graduate Council and the University Curriculum Committee with the following minor revision:

- Correct wording for concentration and verify that catalog for the in-person program.

New Graduate Major: in MS in Psychology Clinical Science presented by Stacy Frazier

- Create a mechanism so that doctoral students can earn an MS that will provide opportunities for funding & fellowships.
- Not asking for a conventional degree but for a Masters enroute to the PhD.
